

The reason we signed up for the Do Not call program was that we did not want to receive calls from unsolicited salespeople, making us drop whatever we were doing to answer the phone. While the telemarketers' calls may be a part of their normal work day, it doesn't mean that it's part of ours. Some of us may already have worked a full day and feel we deserve some peace and quiet when we get home. Our right not to be disturbed in our own homes should certainly take precedence over a telemarketer's right to intrude on our time. What's next????
